New data from the bipartisan polling team Lake Research Partners and Chesapeake Beach Consulting shows that voters across the political spectrum overwhelmingly support the ongoing mission of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) to regulate the financial industry and protect consumers. The survey also revealed strong support for maintaining the secure, independent funding mechanism for the CFPB. These new findings are consistent with over 10 years of opinion research demonstrating strong public support for the agency’s role and work.

Voters are strongly supportive of a variety of specific CFPB policies to protect consumers from excessive fees, predatory debt collection practices, and abusive high-cost lenders. They also strongly support the CFPB taking action to fight discrimination in all areas of banking, not only in lending.

Voters are overwhelmingly supportive of the CFPB’s mission across party lines

- After reading a short description of the CFPB, voters overwhelmingly support the organization’s mission (82%), across party lines.1
  - Over three quarters of Republican voters (77%) and 88% of Democratic voters favor the CFPB.
  - Despite attacks on the CFPB, these numbers have remained largely steady for a decade.

1 Now here is a description of a federal agency, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, or CFPB.

The CFPB, established in 2010, is the first federal agency whose mission is protecting consumers when they use mortgages, credit cards, bank accounts, and other financial products and services. Its mission includes preventing deceptive, unfair, and abusive lending and collection practices by banks and other companies.

From what you know about the mission of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, or CFPB, would you say you favor or oppose the CFPB?
➢ After reading arguments in favor of and against the CFPB’s mission – with arguments against emphasizing alleged harms from government regulation – nearly two thirds of voters agree that it is important for the CFPB to provide rules for financial products (64%). Less than one in five (19%) are more concerned about the CFPB impeding economic growth.²

 Voters support keeping the CFPB securely and independently funded so it can continue to protect consumers in the face of industry lobbying power

➢ After reading arguments on both sides of the CFPB funding issue, over twice as many voters support keeping the CFPB’s current secure funding structure than those who support switching to funding the organization through Congress.³

² Now here are two statements about the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, or CFPB. Please indicate which one is closer to your own view, even if neither is exactly right. [ROTATE]

Just as we have rules to guard against consumer products, like appliances and automobiles, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau should be there to provide similar rules for financial products. Just as it’s against the rules to sell dangerous toys, it should be against the rules to sell dangerous loans and mortgages and have Wall Street interests put our savings and homes at financial risk.

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau is another unaccountable, expensive, federal bureaucracy we don't need. The bureau imposes harsh regulations on small financial businesses lacking resources to manage intrusive government oversight and cuts access to credit. This costs jobs and impedes economic growth. The CFPB is yet another example of out-of-control, big federal government.

³ Now here are two statements about how the CFPB is funded. Please indicate which one is closer to your own view, even if neither is exactly right.

Congress provided the CFPB secure funding when it was founded to ensure Wall Street could not block its actions by taking away its funding. Now, Wall Street and predatory lenders are trying to use their wealth and power to change that, and strip away consumer protections.

The CFPB is a bloated, do-nothing government bureaucracy and a drain on our resources that could be better spent elsewhere. It should be funded through Congress every year like other government programs, so that there is more accountability and oversight.
Over six in ten voters say they are more likely to vote for a member of Congress who supports keeping the CFPB’s current independent funding mechanism (62%) compared to only one fifth who would be less likely.

Across party lines, voters are highly supportive of current and proposed CFPB consumer protection policies

- Voters overwhelmingly support key CFPB policies to protect consumers from predatory lenders and debt collection, including:
  - Holding debt collectors accountable for illegally suing consumers (85%).
  - Prohibiting debt collectors from harassing consumers (85%).
  - Protecting borrowers from abusive student loans and student loan servicers (83%).

5 Below are some new consumer protection actions the CFPB is taking on loans and debt collection. For each, please indicate whether you support or oppose it.
After reading some background information on overdraft fees and a brief head-to-head argument for and against establishing overdraft fee protections, voters overwhelmingly support CFPB policies to curb abusive overdraft fee practices, including:

- Limiting how much banks can charge in overdraft fees (86%).
- Limiting how frequently banks can issue overdraft fees (85%).
- Banning banks from reordering customer transactions to maximize fees (80%).

➢ When given a description of the current payday lending rules and a proposed CFPB policy to protect consumers from predatory payday lenders, voters overwhelmingly support enacting the CFPB policy (79%).

➢ After being given a brief summary of Federal Reserve data on access to credit for small business owners, voters overwhelmingly support a new CFPB policy requiring banks to report data on their small business lending in order to track inequalities in access to credit for women, Black, Latino, Asian, and rural business owners.

7 Now here is some information about a rule that the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau proposed for payday lending: Before issuing a loan, payday lenders must consider the borrower's current expenses and income, and only issue loans to those likely to be able to repay their loans. Before this rule was proposed, there was no requirement that payday lenders make any effort to verify borrowers’ abilities to repay loans. Do you support or oppose this rule to require payday lenders to check a borrower's ability to repay a loan?

8 Now here is some information about small business lending: Research from the Federal Reserve Banks has consistently shown that women, Black, Latino, Asian, and rural small business owners have less access to credit for their businesses. To better understand these inequalities in access to credit, the CFPB recently created a new rule requiring banks to collect data on their small business lending. Do you support or oppose requiring banks to report information on their small business lending in order to track inequalities in access to credit for women, Black, Latino, Asian, and rural business owners?
➢ After reading some information on the CFPB’s actions to combat problems with medical debt collection and credit reporting, voters overwhelmingly support further CFPB action to protect consumers from adverse effects of medical debt (83%).

\(^1\) Methodology: Lake Research Partners and Chesapeake Beach Consulting designed and administered this survey, which was conducted online from September 13-19, 2023. The survey reached a total of 1,550 likely November 2024 voters nationwide.

The sample was stratified by gender, age, region, race, party identification, region by gender, education level, and race by gender to reflect the demographic composition of likely voters. Where there were slight differences between our survey sample and the expected demographic composition, data were weighted accordingly.

The margin of error is +/- 2.5% for the full sample and larger for subgroups and split-sampled questions.

Numbers do not always add up to 100% due to rounding and refusals.

\(^{13}\) Do you support or oppose the CFPB using its authority to regulate new products coming into the market, such as high-cost installment loans, Buy Now Pay Later credit (for example Klarna or Afterpay), and wage advance products (for example Dave or EarnIn)?
